Shultz Says Talks When Frances Page in the Michael Withmedia la se In Moscow Failed to Bring Sides Closer

New York Times Service

MOSCOW — Secretary of State George P. Shultz said Tuesday that the United States and the Soviet Union had failed to reach agreement or narrow differences significantly in any of the areas to be discussed at the meeting between President Ronald Reagan and Mik-hail S. Gorbachev in Geneva in two weeks from now.

At a news conference following 14 hours of discussions with Mr. Gorbachev, the Soviet leader, and Eduard A. Shevardnadze, the foracquired image of advance Barrania. eign minister, Mr. Shultz said dip-lomatic efforts would continue in Moscow and Washington before the summit. But he seemed to hold out little expectation of any major breakthrough.

Girt in Auga France Rainer II gain Efforts to work out differences on arms control, regional issues, human rights and bilateral Soviet-American relations would contin-ue, he said. But he added that "very serious differences" remain,

Asked what the chances were for an accord on agreement in principle for the arms control negotiators in Geneva, or even on a final communique that contained more than a repetition of known differences. Mr. Shultz said. "I wouldn't bet The New York Times on that."

Mr. Shultz said that he was pleased by the exchange of views and felt both sides gained from it. He said that whether the Geneva meeting is a success depended on the attitude of Mr. Reagan and Mr. Gorbachev and not on what others believed

At one point, he said there had been some effort to narrow differences But when asked to amplify. he said he did not want to overplay

The secretary's discussion with Mr. Gorbachev lasted for nearly From hours Tuesday morning and was the lengthiest any U.S. administration official has had with the Soviet leader. Mr. Shultz said they had "a very vigorous discussion."

Outside tensions in Soviet-American relations did not appear to cause problems in the discussions. Mr. Shultz was asked about the case of Vitaly Yurchenko, the KGB official who seemingly defected to the United States last summer, but claimed Monday in Washington that he had been kid-napped and demanded to be allowed to return to the Soviet

Mr. Shultz said that he and Mr. Gorbachev had a "very brief discussion" of the Yurchenko affair at the end of the talks. Mr. Shultz said that the charges by Mr. Yurchenko were "totally false."

Before the meeting began, re-porters saw Mr. Shultz pointing to a battery of phones in Mr. Gorbachev's Kremlin office and asking, 'Can you call anywhere in the Soviet Union with them?"

Mr. Gorbachev, seeming to enjoy being observed by reporters, said, "Yes, and more."

"Thank god," the Soviet leader added, using an everyday Russian expression, "we have communications and opportunities for observation and surveillance that makes things calmer."

"That's right," Mr. Shultz responded. "At the same time, I know cases where I wish I didn't know as much as I knew."

If Mr. Shultz was taken literally Tuesday, and the summit meeting were to take place Wednesday, APASTMENT WANTED there would be no important agreements announced by Mr. Gorbachev and Mr. Reagan.

There was a suspicion among some reporters after the news conference at Spaso House, the residence of the American ambassa-dor, Arthur A. Harman, that Mr. Shultz might have been overstating the lack of progress so that there would be some "surprise announcement" in Genera. But Mr. Shultz in the past has tended to be careful and precise in his descriptions of such encounters.

Mr. Shultz left Tuesday night for an overnight step in Iceland before returning to Washington on Wednesday afternoon.

LUXEMBOURG - King Hussein of Jordan, renewing his call for an international conference on the Middle East, reaffirmed Tuesday his belief that the Palestine Liberation Organization should take part in any serious peace talks.

Hussein, addressing the parliament on the second day of a state visit to Luxembourg noted that the PLO was acknowledged by the United Nations as the legitimate representative of the Palestinian cople. "In any meaningful negotiations leading to the peace we all seek." he said, "the legitimate Palestinian representatives should be invited to participate in the peace process." Hussein's strong renewed com-

But he cautioned: "Little can be achieved if the United States shirks its responsibilities as a superpower and as a champion of human rights, freedom and the right to self-determination."

Hussein said that an international conference should be held under the auspices of the United Nations and should include all five permanent members of the UN Security Council, as well as all parties to the conflict. He said he hoped the United States would "participate and partake actively."

He also met with Jacques Poos. Luxembourg's foreign minister, who currently holds the presidency of the European Community. Mr. Poos said afterward that the king had outlined a four-stage plan for peace in the Middle East. Under the plan, Mr. Poos said, a Jordanian delegation would first meet with U.S. representatives. Then, the PLO would explicitly recognize Israel. Next, a Jordanian-Palestinian delegation would meet U.S. negotiators within the framework of the international conference, and the conference would clear the way to direct peace talks and a final settlement.

Mr. Poos said the plan deserved EC support. He said he had told Hussein that EC officials still were prepared to receive a Jordanian-Palestinian delegation.

Marcos Seems To Backtrack On Election

MANILA - President Ferdinand E. Marcos seemed to back away Tuesday from a firm commitment to a presidential election in January but has agreed to include the vice presidency if an election does take place.

Mr. Marcos issued a statement Tuesday reversing a previous indication that he would call an election by presidential decree. Instead, the statement said, he would leave the calling of an election up to the Philippine legislature. "We will throw everything to Ba-tasang Pambansa and it is up to Batasang to decide whether to hold the special election or not," the statement said. The Balasang Pambansa, or National Assembly, is controlled by Mr. Marcos's New Society Movement.

Royal Visit: Why Such a Fuss? Answer Lies in History, Language and U.S. Character

By R.W. Apple Jr.

New York Times Service

WASHINGTON — The imminent visit of a young British couple, he 36 years old, she 24, has sent a frisson of excitement through Washington unmatched in the memory of old-timers in a city quite accustomed to receiving the glamorous and the celebrated.

The Prince and Princess of Wales are not due here until Saturday morning, but already the news-papers, inagazines and television natworks are outdoing themselves: What is their marriage really like? How much money do they earn for British business? Does she get along with her in-laws? How are they rearing their children? What are their political views, if any? All of which leaves one larger question: Why do

Washington, it is always said, is a city about power. The royal visitors have next to none and. even when Prince Charles inherits the British throne from Queen Elizabeth II, they will not have a great deal. Not as much as this Supreme Court justice or that cabinet member, both of whom would go unnoticed if they ever rode the subway,

It cannot be simple glamour; the former Lady Diana Spencer is a beautiful woman, all right, although some Britons have been caddish enough to suggest that her nose is a bit too large or that sne has become too thin, but other beautiful women

Charles sometimes complains to his intimates, can fortunes equal to the prince's, if not to the Crown's, and plenty of American women with wardrobes that outshine that of the princess. The answer is much more complicated, a com-pound of the obvious and the subtle. Youth and glamour and money matter, but so does tradition; t matters that Charles marches in the line stretching back to Victoria and Elizabeth I and William the Conqueror and yes, even George III.

Lacking a monarchy, lacking even an indirectly elected chief of state such as West Germany's president, Americans gravitate toward the British monarchy, although some are made uncomfortable by dim 18th-century republican folk-memories, which show up in a reluctance to bow or curtsy. That particular monarchy appeals to Americans because of a common language, because of cultural bonds, because of Britain's eminence among the countries that still have sovereigns, but also because some people in the United States feel vaguely that they are a part of it.

Each summer, tens of thousands of Americans stand outside Buckingham Palace, watching the changing of the guard, hoping for a glimpse of some member of the royal family. Ask why they are there, and they will say, whether their names are Lombardi or Schultz or O'Brien or whatever.

To New Zealand's Pique, France Says Deal Was Made on Agents

Zealand appeared to be in the making Tuesday as Foreign Minister Roland Dumas of France said that negotiations between the two countries had led New Zealand to reduce charges against two French secret agents being held there.

The party chairman, Leslie Greene, called Monday Election Commission to hold a new election within four weeks in the presence of foreign observers. The Liberia Unity Party and the Liberia Action Party refused seats last week.

The election commission announced Oct. 29 that the military head of state, Major General Samuel K. Doe, had been elected president with 50.9 percent of the vote and that his National Democratic Party of Liberia had won 72 of the legislature's 90 seats.

If you're trying to get an international project off the ground, IBM has just the vehicle for you.

It's called International Business Services (IBS) and it makes light work of coordinating business operations from country to country, continent to continent.

Lake the building of a new aircraft for example. With aerospace partners in France, Germany, Italy and the U.K. pooling resources and ideas to develop and market the new plane.

IBS can help them put the pieces together.

Linking different data processing operations.

Providing easy access to common information, speeding development and implementation of critical applications.

And offering comprehensive on-site support wherever or whenever it might be needed.

Whatever the industry, whatever the international project, IBS computers, software and personnel can quickly help you keep overall investment and development under control.

With country talking clearly to country.

All organised for you, with valuable savings in the cost, time and complexity of installing and setting up a system of your own.

And with IBS, language is no

A flexible software system -Application System – allows business professionals to analyse, present and share the same information with their partners, whilst working in their respective national languages.

So project control can be managed on a centralised basis with each partner contributing data and profiting from the results.

Budgeting can be controlled on an overall, rather than piecemeal basis, using the same database and proven project control techniques.

Thus, for example, ensuring that plans for a wing sub-assembly developed in the U.K. get to the fuselage factory in Germany on time.

Replacing a process previously dependant on paperwork - a commodity which doesn't always travel well.

With IBS computer expertise you can develop distribution management applications designed to check invoices, establish shipping dates, assess volumes of materials, draw up the right export documentation - in short, track the whole process from factory to factory, country to country.

So, whether you're working in aerospace or agriculture, operating in Europe, the U.S., Japan - or any other world business centre you'll find International Business Services can help your business fly.

WASHINGTON - American voters went to the polls Tuesday to decide referendums ranging from abortion to "nuclear-free" zones.

Scores of state and local proposals calling for new bond issues or tax increases, or both, were to test the dominant view in Washington that Americans are resistant to new

Among these are a bond issue of more than a billion dollars in Texas to provide new water supplies in the west and curb flooding in the east, a $100-million bond issue in Ohio to pay for research to help make the state's high-sulfur coal more marketable and several local initiatives in California seeking to reverse the tax-cutting momentum created by the Proposition 13 taxreduction measure in 1978.

Some divisive issues of the de-

Support Grows in Congress to Delay Soviet Ship, Disputed Sailor in U.S.

By Philip Shenon

New York Times Service WASHINGTON — Congressional support has grown for a request that the Reagan administration stop a Soviet freighter from leaving the United States with a sailor who jumped ship and was returned to the vessel later by the U.S. authori-

Three Democrats and two Republicans in the Senate signed a letter Monday assailing what they called the "disgraceful" handling of the incident by the Immigration and Naturalization Service; which returned the sailor to the vessel at one point over his protests.

3 Held in Mexico Killing Of 22 Police Officers

MINATITLAN, Mexico Three suspects have been detained in Mexico in the search for a drug gang that ambushed and killed 22 police officers in the southeast state of Verseruz, Mexican officials said Toesday.

Sources at the federal general attorney's office said that two police men who had escaped from the killers were being closely ques-tioned. They said the killings apparently began with a gun battle Thursday when the policemen

Cape Town Editor May Face Charges Police Warn Him After Publication of ANC Interview

By Allister Sparks Washington Post Service

JOHANNESBURG - Police called on the editor of The Cape Times on Tuesday and warned him that he might be prosecuted for his defiant publication Monday of an interview with the president of the outlawed African National Con-

Readers, however, flooded the liberal Cape Town newspaper with congratulatory messages, the editor, Anthony Heard, said.

South African officials also called on the Reverend Allan Boesak, a mixed-race religious leader who is president of the World Alliance of Reformed Churches, to inform him that the government had overruled a court decision returning his passport.

Mr. Boesak, who was arrested Aug. 27 on subversion charges and released on bail, now will not be able to make a trip to the United States to collect a human rights award on Nov. 20.

In a third development, seven pastors of the influential Dutch Reformed Church were forced Tuesday to abandon plans to meet leaders of the African National Congress when Home Affairs Minister Stoffel Botha warned them they would not be allowed to leave the country. All three actions reflect a hardening of attitude by the government of President Pieter W. Botha as it comes under increasing pressure from racial unrest, mounting internal criticism on both its left and its right, and growing international condemnation.

The minister of law and order. Louis Le Grange, was quoted by the semi-official South African broadcasting service Tuesday as saying he had called for the prosecution of Mr. Heard for publishing a long interview with Oliver Tambo, president of the guerrilla organization.

Mr. Heard said later in a telephone interview from Cape Town that a lieutenant of the security police had arrived at his office to warn him that an investigation into a possible contravention of the law was being launched.

Under South Africa's stringent security laws, it is a crime to quote any individual or organization declared banned by the government.

The African National Congress. South Africa's main African nationalist movement, was banned nearly 25 years ago and no full statement by the organization or any of its leaders had appeared inside the country until Mr. Heard published his 3,600-word interview with Mr. Tambo on Monday.

If he is prosecuted and convicted, the editor could be sentenced to three years improcupant without Bishop Tutu, who is black, and three years improcupant without Mr. Naude, a white Afrikaner, three years imprisonment without the option of a fine.

Mr. Heard said he had been encouraged by the "cascade" of con-

WHALE OF A TALE - A humpback whale that baffled marine experts by swimming up the Sacramento River on a 24-day, 60-mile (100-kilometer) excursion headed out to sea Monday. As crowds cheered, the whale swam under San Francisco's Golden Gate Bridge, accompanied by a flotilla of small boats. More than $60,000 was spent in attempts to get the whale to turn back to the Pacific. The 40-ton creature finally seemed to respond to an electronic device that imitated underwater cries of humpbacks.

Navy Says It Turned Jet Prices Around

John F. Lehman Jr., the secretary of the navy, says military aircraft prices went up for three-decades by about 10 percent a year, on top of inflation, because of "goldplating"—the practice of adding unnecessary features—and of contracting with only one supplier.

Mr. Lehman said that since he introduced competition and got "goldplating lust under control," navy aircraft prices dropped. He said the price of a Grumman F-14 Tomcat, the navy's premier fight-er, dropped $3.9 million to $20 million between 1982 and this year.

Short Takes

Senator Robert J. Dole, an unannounced candidate for the 1988 Republican presidential nomina-tion, said he had a forthcoming speaking engage-ment in Vermont and planned to "drop by and see my friends in New Hampshire," site of the country's earliest presidential primary. "As I look back on 1980," the Kansas senator added, "that shouldn't take long." That year Ronald Reaganwon the primary with 33,000 votes. Mr. Dole finished seventh with 597. Mr. Dole is undaunted. He said that on a recent-visit to the Kansas State Fair, he saw one man wearing a "Dump Dole" hat.
"I put him down as undecided," the senator said.

Almost as many Americans died in the Korean War, 54,259, as in the Vietnam War, 58,022, but there is no Korean War memorial in the Washington area, a lack that a veteran of that conflict, Senator John H. The employees moved so swiftly they neglected to check whether refunds had already been mailed to the people on a computerized list. Duplicate checks totaling $236,000 were mailed to nearly 1,000 state residents. Mr. Baldwin said the error was embarrassing and "a lot my fault."

Americans are saving a smaller portion of their incomes than at any time since the early 1950s. The annual savings rate sank to 2.9 percent of income during the summer, less than half the rate for most of the past decade. Economists are concerned. pointing out that savings are a primary economic resource. They ascribe the drop to readier credit, a lederal tax system that subsidizes borrowing and the growth of health and retirement benefits.

This winter the federal Energy Assistance Program will once again earmark up to $2.1 billion to help poor people pay for home heating. In addi-tion, more and more public utilities are adding a box to their monthly bills for customers to check if they wish to contribute $1 toward the same cause. The utilities then turn the money over charities to distribute. These "fuel funds" are expected to raise about $30 million this year.

Late for a luncheon appointment, Dale Remington, a television producer, telephoned the Four Seasons restaurant in mid-Manhattan and asked the person who answered to "go to the bar and inform Chota Chudasama that I'll be a bit late," The New York Times reported. Asked how to recognize Mr. Chudasama, Mr. Remington said, "He's an Indian." There was a brief pause before the voice inquired, "Feather or dot?"

Administration officials confirmed earlier reports Monday that a U.S. SR-71 reconnaissance plane, attempting to measure the ship-ments in a mission over Cuba on Thursday, was targeted by a Cuban anti-aircraft missile site but apparently did not draw fire.

According to recent intelligence reports, Soviet ships have unloaded crates of military equipment at the Cuban port of Mariel.

The equipment, which appears to include trucks and T-54 tanks, was later boarded on small Nicaraguan cargo vessels and delivered to the port of El Bluff in Nicaragua, administration officials said.

The Pentagon estimates the Nicaraguan Army now has at least 340 tanks and armored vehicles, including 110 T-54 and T-55 tanks, more than 70 long-range howitzers and rocket launchers, and 30 helicopters, including at least a half dozen of the fast attack helicopters, Mi-24 HINDs.

Guatemala Runoff Election Certain; Runner-Up Refuses to Concede Defeat

GUATEMALA CITY - A oderate conservative politician who was runner-up in Guatemala's first election for a civilian president in 15 years has dismissed a call by the winner to concede defeat, making a runoff election certain.

Nearly complete election results gave six rightist parties a combined 56 percent of the vote. This would give them power to block any legislation considered reformist, political analysts said.

that they are touching base, "seeing where we come from," re-establish-ing the connection with Europe, In a curious way, Americans feel closest to the country they rebelled against, and the hubbub over the royal visit is one sign of that.

The final and crucjal element in persuading ordinarily sensible people to pay so much attention to royal visitors is the passion for celebrity, which is one of the notable features of the times. In other eras, it was war heroes and great politi-cal leaders who were celebrated.

Now Americans are fascinated. more than most peoples, by people with more ephemeral claims to fame, with fewer real achievements. The prince and princess are beneficiaries of this, as are football stars and television commentators.

But they offer much more to the celebrity-watcher. The actress's secrets may be pried out, but not the princess's: as much as her sense of fun may seem to have "modernized" the monarchy, it really has not changed things at all. As Walter Bagehot observed in the last century, the monarchy's "mystery is its life." Only the pope spends so much time in public yet keeps so much clothed in secrecy.

Thus, even when the prince gives an interview, which is not often, he leaves doubt about his political views, and he seldom says anything pointed on any subject.

It may well be, as a recent Washington Post-ABC News poll suggested, that most Americans have no clearly established opinion of the prince or the princess. But one need have no clearly established opinion of symbols to react strongly to them: they are by their nature not well defined, and yet they can be very potent indeed.

Such negotiating does not appear to be likely at the Geneva summit with the Soviet leader, Mikhail S. Gorbachev, Mr. Reagan told the British Broadcasting Corp. last week that the only bargaining he envisioned at Geneva would be toward an agreement to share the strategic defense technology once it is developed.

The BBC interview also illus-

The White House spokesman Larry Speakes, did not retract what Mr. Reagan said, but attempted to clarify it using the more cautious language that has been official po-licy. Mr. Speakes said Mr. Reagan cuvisioned a "transition" phase before deployment during which the United States would negotiate with the allies and the Soviet Union

Another White House spokes man, Edward P. Djerejian, said this "transition" would include a gradual phasing out of offensive weapons, not immediate elimination.
The actual deployment of strategic defenses is many years away, but there has been intense contro-versy over U.S. intentions for the program, in part because the Soviet Union has sought to limit it and in part because of restrictions in the 1972 Anti-Ballistic Missile Treaty. The administration was thrown into a major internal debate in recent weeks on an interpretation of the treaty, precisely because of questions about long-term U.S. in-tentions for a space-based missile defense system.

Stopping the Trade Battle

Seeking, in 1940, to dissuade Britain's The world can hardly prosper if Europe — ponderous labor unions from demanding and America — stay locked into improvihigher wages for their war effort. John Maynard Keynes became frustrated with what he called a process of "slow talk." Current attempts to free up world trade are equally frustrating. It may be a full year before real negotiations begin.

In the 1950s and 1960s, the world prospered as successive rounds of multilateral bargaining under the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade, or GATT, helped to lower international trade barriers, Increasingly, the industrialized countries accepted the principle of free competition. This raised industrial efficiency, boosted employment and helped keep inflation down. The last decade, unhappily, has seen this process reversed. Not only have both Europe and America been re-erecting the barriers to imports, they also have been dumping their products, particularly farm goods, abroad at subsidized prices. This delays the conquest of inflation, depresses business, aggravates Third World indebtedness and almost certainly, on balance, leads to a loss of jobs.

The importance of getting on with a new round of trade negotiations lies in the probability that if things do not get better they will get worse. But the new talks will not begin until it is clearer exactly what is to be negotiated. Traditionally, bargaining within GATT has concentrated on liberalizing trade in industrial goods. This time, however, there is strong pressure to include farm goods, and that places the European Community, with its extravagant agricultural policy, on the defensive. And the United States is putting many Third World countries on the defensive by demanding that trade in services — banking, insurance, communications, computer software and other sectors - should be on the bargaining table as well.

More flexibility is needed if the real business of trade liberalization is to begin again.

dent policies to featherbed their farmers. both rich and poor. And it is doubtful whether this is the right moment to include services in the trade bargaining process. The poorer countries' fear of being invaded by the service sectors of the rich probably is exaggerated. But it is more important, immediately, to reverse the move toward protection in industry and agriculture than to bring services into the procedure.

A new round of GATT talks will be no panacea for the world's economic ills. It will be slow. And it will not correct the major imbalances of today - the Third World debt problem. America's huge trade deficit and Japan's awe-inspiring surplus. The whole point of such bargaining is to try to match each country's gains and concessions. This cannot substitute for the macroeconomic adjustments — the changes in fiscal and monetary policies, exchange rates and policies to control inflation - that are needed to produce a better pattern of international payments.

But the promise offered by a new round of GATT negotiations is, in the long run, immense. Lower trade barriers, as Secretary of State Cordell Hull insisted while World War II was still raging, can put the world back on the path to higher living standards, greater efficiency and lower international strife. The alternative - expressed clearly last week by Clayton K. Yeutter, the U.S. trade representative - is bleak. If there is no GATT round, America will make bilateral trade pacts, effectively negating the postwar system of nondiscrimination between individual countries. This can be the route down which Hjalmar Schacht. Hitler's economics minister. led Nazi Germany - economic autarky such as is practiced today by

'Summit Syndrome': Reagan Must Beware

By Daniel Schore

WASHINGTON — A series of intensive briefings, called fine-tuning," are giving President Reagan a firm grasp of administra-tion positions for his meetings Nov. 19 and 20 with Mikhail S. Gorbachev in Geneva. What the briefings cannot do is immunize him against Summit Syndrome - a tendency toward impetuousness on the lonely peaks of statesmanship, marked by unpremeditated remarks and sometimes producing unexpected outcomes.

Those of us familiar with 30 years of superpower summitry can recall some of the consequences of im-promptu top-level diplomacy. Perhaps the most successful East-West summit meeting since the war, from the American viewpoint, was the first. In Geneva, in 1955, Nikita S. Khrushchev failed to lure President Dwight D. Eisenhower into a one-on-one conversation with him-self or with Marshal Georgi K. Zhukov. Mr. Fisenhower's wartime comrade-in-arms, who had been brought along for that specific purpose. Mr. Khrushchev complained in his mem-oirs that Mr. Eisenhower had been much too dependent on his advisers," acting like "a dutiful schoolboy" to his secretary of state, John

Impromptu top-level diplomacy can have dangerous — and unforeseen — results.

What Mr. Khrushchev did not know was that, in deciding to go to Geneva, Mr. Eisenhower had overridden Secretary Dulles and the Republican old guard, who feared he might "give away the store," as they believed President Roosevelt had done at Yalta and Potsdam.

The surprise proposal for "open skies" arms-control inspection. which rurned out to be a public-relations triumph, had been developed secretly for the president by a non-governmental task force headed by Velson A. Rockefeller, unknown to the State and Defense departments.

It was perhaps overconfidence, nurtured by success at the Geneva. that led President Eisenhower into a grave misunderstanding when he next met Mr. Khrushchev, at Camp David, Maryland, in the fall of 1959. As told to me by the late Liewellyn K. Thompson, a two-time ambassa-dor to Moscow, the president at one point invited Mr. Khrushchev for a walk to see a new bowling alley and went off with him, accompanied only by a Soviet interpreter. When they returned, three-quarters of an hour later, Mr. Eisenhower said they had not discussed anything substantive enough to warrant dictating a memorandum of conversation.

It later developed that during their stroll, the president had agreed inno-cently with Mr. Khrushchev that the situation in Berlin, a four-power island inside East Germany, was "abnormal" and that some new arrangement could be discussed.

convinced that the United States was ready to make concessions on the status of the divided city — an idea of which he quickly was disabused in a State Department statement, which provoked a furious speech in which Mr. Khrushchev charged a doublecross. It was undoubtedly this, as much as the incident over the shoot-ing down of the U-2 spy plane, that led Mr. Khrushchev to storm out of the 1960 meeting in Paris.

The subject of Berlin came up again when President John F. Kenne-dy met with Mr. Khrushchev in Vienna in June 1961, again with serious consequences. Mr. Khrushchev took offense at the president's warning about "miscalculation," which the Soviet leader termed patronizing and threatening. A blustering Mr. Khru-shchev announced that he would sign a separate peace treaty with East Germany and convert Berlin into a "free city." A conciliatory sounding Mr. Kennedy, while asserting U.S. rights, said that no doubt the situation in Berlin was ausatisfactory but that this should not upset the balance of power. Mr. Khrushchev shrewdly drew his conclusions.

The Soviet leader wrote in his memoirs that he found Mr. Kennedy "a reasonable man" who "was inter-ested in finding a peaceful solution to world problems and in avoiding con-flict with the Soviet Union." So, Mr. Khrushchev concluded, "I think he knew he wouldn't be justified in starting a war over Berlin."

Mr. Kennedy knew, as he later said, that he had created "a terrible problem" in Mr. Khrushchev's perception that he was inexperienced and weak. Seeking to dispel that, Mr. Kennedy called up the military re-serves, increased the defense budget and urged Americans to build bomb shelters. But, in August the wall between East and West Berlin started to rise, and in his memoirs Mr. Khru-shchev boasted, "I think it was a great victory for us, and it was won without firing a shot." Vienna had turned out to be a costly summit meeting for America.

The Nixon and Ford summit meetings produced no such dramatic fallout, although aides remained traumatized by the dangers of direct diplomacy. For example, when President Richard M. Nixon, during his third summit session with Leonid I. Brezhnev, in June 1974, strolled off with him to a grotto near his Crimean villa, Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger and the White House chief of staff. Alexander M. Haig Jr., clustered with staff members at the swimming pool, wondering nervously what the two leaders might be talking about — and possibly deciding. But Mr. Nixon later satisfied his aides that he had said nothing to mislead Mr. Brezhnev about U.S. policy. President Gerald R. Ford, in his 1975 meeting with Mr. Brezhnev in Vladivostok, reached an agreement in principle that set the stage for the SALT-2 agreement. But Mr. Ford never strayed from what was basically a Kissinger script, nor did herneet alone with Mr. Brezhnev.

Now it is President Reagan's turn with Mr. Gorbachev. Undoubtedly, Mr. Gorbachev would look for opportunities for a private, informal conversation. If history is any guide, Mr. Reagan should be on guard against generalities with unrecognized meanings. In the heady atmosphere, the urge will be strong to write a page of history with a new "spirit of Geneva." That should be guarded against, lest the president fall into the Summit Syndrome.

The writer, who has covered almost all East-West summit meetings, is now national affairs correspondent for Na-tional Public Radio. He contributed this comment to The New York Times.

In France, A Problem Of Identity

By Flora Lewis

P ARIS - The most interesting and disturbing, French political phenomenon as this country moves loward crucial parhamentary elections next year is a chubby, pink-faced, planaum blond named Jean-Marie Le Pen. Mr. Le Pen. 56. heads a party called the National Front, grown suddenly in the last couple of years from a thuggish frage group on the extreme right. The polls show him with 10 percent to 12 percent of the vote, which would mean 30 to 40. assembly seats under the new system of proportional representation.

The other major parties have de-nounced him. He has been called a Fascist, a racist, an anti-Semile on the basis of his arguments; a har, a slanderer, a purveyor of disinforma-tion on the basis of his method.

At his party's national convention last weekend, he denied all that, saying he was being made a victim of "political apartheid." He attacks everybody else, condemning France's Fifth Republic as "powerless," its administration as "buseaucratic totali-rarianism," its leftish intellectuals as "tyrannous," and its educational sysiem as Marxist mythinizary. This posters show him with a strip of red cloth across his mouth. The caption reads, "Le Pen tells the truth but he is being gagged."

He delivers his long, rambling peeches with a warm smile, lively but modest gestures, lots of amusing quips. His supporters roar approva chart his name, stand and applaud rhythmically. His posters show him

The problem is precisely that his mean-minded message, offered with cheerful, charming style, is getting across. The message is that the problems of France all stem from the influx of migrants, specifically Arabs and Africans. Mr. Le Pen has two themes, foreigners and crime in the streets, which he suggests are synonymous. He appeals to the utmost of French chauvinism and xenophobia. Mr. Le Pen's campaign has been amphified by an extraordinary demographic projection published in the mass-circulation Le Figaro-Magazine. Under the title "Will we still be French in 30 years?" it shows France's symbolic Marianne veiled and jeweled as an Arab princess.

Le Figuro claims that by 2015, "non-Enropean foreigners" will dominate France, destroy its culture, make Islam its prevailing religion, and tip it "over into the Third World unless something is done now."

Recruitment of foreign workers was halted years ago and immigra-tion is tightly controlled, so putting the issue as a matter of border surveillance is a euphemism. What the National Front proposes is to cut off social security and other nondiscri-minating rights and benefits for these foreigners" in an attempt to drive them out. French-born children of

The longstanding law that anybody born in France has a right to French citizenship is challenged under the evasive charge that this constitutes "automatic naturalization." Being "truly French" is not defined, but a "swarthy" skin is considered one sign of foreignness.

In some ways, Mr. Le Pen's rise parallels periodic surges of the extreme right in France, historically with Jews as the scapegoat but this time focused on Arabs. It is an irony that he is winning popularity as the Communist Party declines; it is down now to about 10 percent. Undoubtedly, a substantial number of ex-Communist voters have switched to the opposite extreme. Some officials of the Socialist government thus tend to dismiss Mr. Le Pen on the ground that traditionally the extremes in France add up to around 20 percent and that the only difference now is that the balance has shifted between the two ends.

This tends to disguise the fact that the ruling Socialists and the conservative opposition each have sought to exploit the National Front against the other. The Socialists accuse the conservatives of secret collusion, although they evidently hope that Mr. Le Pen's group will prevent the respectable right from winning an absolute majority. The conservatives blame the Socialists for faming Mr. Le Pen's popularity with their "lax" policies and their electoral reform.

Both sides are playing with fire. Both have had to accept "immigration" and crime as campaign issues. Under Mr. Le Pen's attack, France's self-image as a land of assured freedom and liberal hospitality is more endangered than its Frenchness.

Marcos's Election Gamble

President Ferdinand Marcos, whose misrule is crushing the Philippines, has finally done something encouraging. By calling a presiden-tial election for Jan. 17, he has acknowledged the contention of his many critics, domestic and foreign, that the mandate he now enjoys is inadequate and that the situation in the Philippines requires action. His offer opens up a vista that did not exist as long as he insisted he would serve until his term expired in 1987.

Most informed observers concluded some time ugo that it was foolish to expect real reform from the authoritarian Mr. Marcos, an expert in manipulating the political game to his ends, and those of his corrupt cronies. The question, which had not been answered satisfactorily, was whether the United States might somehow undo Mr. Marcos's effort to board himself in behind his country's democratic forms and its usefulness to U.S. strategic interests. With Mr. Marcos now committed to risking his power in an early election, a new set of calculations enters in.

Mr. Marcos well knows, or he should, how suspect are elections in which, as former Foreign Minister Raul Manglapus has warned, "the dictator himself is to be a candidate. [retaining] all his absolute power and his control of the army, the Commission on Elections, the secret police, all national media, and all significant public and private funds." So Mr. Marcos, to ensure that his offer of elections serves his nation's interest, must outline promptly the procedure for fairness he has in mind. The traditional way for dictators to let go - even those who, like Mr. Marcos, exploit the forms of democracy - is simply to step down and yield the field to national forces, including the military and the political parties. How else does Mr. Marcos expect to gain respect for the new elections? Cynics suggest that Mr. Marcos called the early elections merely to embarrass his political opposition, which he has done his best to keep weak and divided, and to quiet what he calls "childish claims" - many from the best American sources - that he has lost touch with the people. If that is true, then the United States has its job cut out for it: to persuade Mr. Marcos to follow through on his promise of elections, a promise he already appears to be hedging. President Reagan is increasingly being drawn into the effort to save the Philippines from Ferdinand Marcos. He can expect no better opportunity for a long time.

U.S. Power in the Philippines

Are we condemned to watch the lone bastion of American military power in Southeast Asia fall? What are the threats to the U.S. bases — and to the Philippines as an ally? The expansion of the New People's Army is the first threat. Manila estimates this force's strength at 9,000 men. The Pentagon puts the figure at 16,500. Intelligence sources say the Communist insurgency is growing daily. A second threat is the clamor by opposition politicians and some members of the Marcos government for a U.S. withdrawal [from Subic Bay Naval Base and Clark Air Base]. An American retirement to Guam and Tinian Island would cost upward of $8 billion, Defense Department sources say, and would mean a serious loss of the U.S. strategic advantage in Southeast Asia.

One answer to the military threat is strong American support for the efforts of General Fidel Ramos, the acting chief of staff, to reform and re-equip the Philippine Army. American sources report that soldiers often lack shoes and ammunition, that rifles and machine guns are sold to the insurgents and that capable young officers are sidetracked in favor of friends of Mr. Marcos and his cabal.

General Ramos has made a good start. The United States intends to increase the number of training teams that instruct the Philippine Army in maintenance, logistics and adminisemploying American soldiers as advisers in field operations against the insurgents.

J OHANNESBURG — The government of President Pieter W. Botha has fallen between stools. Its reform program has proved too limited. enough to forfeit the confidence of hard-line Afrikaner voters. The result is a devastating combination of black unrest and white backlash that revealed itself in a series of by-elections last week.

The government appears to have persuaded itself that the unrest is not the result of black anger but is the work of a few agitators. Its solution is to use tougher security measures, not a new political approach. The by-election results should be no cause for alarm. The government has a two-thirds majority over all other parties combined, and computer predictions show that the 17.2-percent swing in the by-elections to the far-rightist parties would enable them to win only 6 more seats than the 18 now held by the breakaway Conservative Party of Andries Treumicht. But the Botha government has a deep-rooted fear of seeing its power base in the white Afrika-ner tribe eroded. The thought that the far rightist parties may become the new custodians of Afrikaner nationalism's holy grail is a nightmare that cannot be dispelled by new English votes.

Mr. Botha said he would "take cognizance of why people voted the way they did." That probably means he will move even more cautiously with his reforms, and crack down harder on the perceived agitators.

But slower reforms and harsher action in the townships can only increase black anger, leading to more unrest, which in turn will result in a stepping up of the international sanctions campaign and a further loss of business confidence,

Botha's Dilemma, and a Daring Way Out of It to capture black imaginations but extensive causing more economic hardship and more of a white backlash: a vicious cycle.

A leader in Mr. Botha's position is bound to lose hard-line support as soon as he declares in favor of reform. If he then moves forward halfheartedly, he fails to win new support from the recipients of his reforms. Nor does his tentativeness bring back the hard-liners.

Mr. Botha's ambiguity has caused a crisis of confidence in his leadership. The issue now, many believe, is whether a bold leap could persuade black South Africans that the government really intends to dismantle apartheid. Those who favor such a course suggest it might unfold with this kind of declaration of intent:

1. The government declares its intent to rescind all apartheid legislation within one year. during which time it will begin negotiations with representatives from all sectors of the community to devise a nonracial and nondiscriminatory ustitutional system. 2. The government makes only one advance stipulation, that it will insist on agreed, perma-nently entrenched safeguards for minority groups so that apartheid is not replaced by another system of racial oppression.

3. As a gesture of good faith, the government announces the unconditional release of Nelson Mandela and other members of the African National Congress imprisoned for life.

4. The government invites the president of the ANC, Oliver Tambo, to return to South Africa under indemnity from arrest to take part in the constitutional talks.

reciprocal gesture by suspending its campaign of violence. The government notes that the ANC has always claimed that it turned to violence only because it was deprived of the right to campaign for change by constitutional means. The government announces the release of all persons who have been detained under emergency regulations and the Internal Security Act since the current unrest began, and the withdrawal of all charges against them. 7. The government again hopes that the persons concerned will make a reciprocal gesture by using their influence to bring an end to the widespread unrest in the country. 8. The government appeals to the international community, and especially neighboring states in southern Africa, to cease all hostile acts against South Africa and to use their influence to help stabilize the country. Such a declaration would have a galvanizing effect. Doubtless there would be a further loss of voter support on the right, but many other whites anxious to see genuine reform would rally behind the government.

Black leaders would be certain to respond positively. The level of unrest would diminish. and, with support replacing threats from abroad, business confidence would recover. An improved economic climate would help limit the growth of both white reaction and black extremis Those who support this approach do not pre-tend that a transition to a new nonracial society would be easy. But they believe it offers a fair chance to end the victous cycle of black unrest and white backlash.

1910: Greece's 'Crisis of Rebirth'

PARIS -- Greece is passing through a crisis of rebirth. The vital need is not merely a revision of the Constitution, but a revision of almost everything. Greece is not a poor country. Thessaly alone could support the whole country with its wheat. But it does not Why? The answer is that Greece's finances are not based on scientific principle; that taxes are not all naid: that the Customs system is antiquated: that justice is slow; and that economic development is backward. Even men educated for the work of reform are wanting. It is the dearth of such men that presents perhaps the greatest difficulty to M. Eleutherios Venizelos, the new Prime Minister. The revolution that condemned the old chiefs has laid a greater burden on the new leader. Greece, awakening. demands more than mere political ability.

1935: New Hope for Lower Tariffs PRAGUE - Proof of hope among the world's governments for downward revision of tariff rates through international agreements was supplied by J. Butler Wright, American Minister to Czechoslovakia. He quoted Secretary of State Cordell Hull, who recently sold the U.S. Chamber of Commerce: "Our program envisages that the important nations of the world will proceed gradually... to readjust to a more reasonable level the existing excessive tariffs." The speaker added that a League of Nations committee has adopted a resolution stating that the removal of arbitrary trade restrictions was indispensable to economic recovery. Mr. Wright also quoted Sir Samuel Hoare, Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs of Great Britain: "The lowering of trade barriers is one of the fundamental tasks of the present time."

Baker's Latin Debt Proposal: Positive, but Impractical

WASHINGTON — There is much to be said for Treasury Secretary James Baker's highly touted initiative on Third World debt. What cannot be said is that it will provide a long-term solution to the critical debt problem that countries such as Mexico are facing today. Mr. Baker's plan comes down to three points. First, it offers a conceptual shift of emphasis from austerity and economic adjustments to economic growth. Then, in order to finance that growth, the plan proposes an increase in lending to debtor countries by commercial banks; the World Bank also might eventually provide guarantees for new private loans. Finally, Mr. Baker calls for structural reforms in the indebted nations; it in order to make economic growth truly self-sustained. insofar as the Baker proposal marks a change in the Reagan administration's policy toward the Latin American debt dilemma, it is unquestionably a positive development. By admitting that a new policy is necessary, it implicitly recognizes what many already knew: that the remedies stitched together under dire circumstances during the Mexican crash

ented and open economies necessary of 1982 have not worked. To the extent that the Baker approach emphasizes growth, it implies that the United States finally has understood that all debt service and no growth make for an explosive political situation in most debtor countries. In fact, this realization probably led to the new plan. It was becoming obvious that by sacrificing everything — growth, investments, imports and living standards — to meet interest payments, Latin American nations were seriously straining their social and political fabric. Unfortunately, the new U.S. strategy does not directly address this key problem, and it may even make it worse. Despite its positive features, Secretary Baker's plan appears to the problem. The economy went through a severe adjustment in 1983 and the first half of 1984. Gross national product shrank 5 percent the first year and stagnated the first half of the next year. Real wages decreased by nearly 40 percent, but inflation, public spending and trade deficits were brought under control. Largely because of this, the economy racked up a hefty surplus in its foreign accounts. That surplus was used to pay the $12 billion to $14 billion per year - or 55 percent to 60 percent of export earnings — eaten up by service on the $95-billion debt. But by mid-1984 it became clear that the political and social costs of orthodox adjustment policies were becoming dangerously high. Conse-quently, President Miguel de la Madrid eased up on those policies and began spending; the Mexican econo-my, which responds to public policy in Pavlovian fashion, began growing. During the last quarter of 1984 and the first quarter of this year, it grew at a 7-percent annual rate. Jobs were being created, investment was up. and the mood in Mexico was changing, from despair and resignation to a glimmer of hope and optimism.

It was not to be. As before, growth brought skyrocketing imports (mainly from the United States) and stagnating exports. The trade surplus shrank 48 percent during the first seven months of 1985. Almost overnight it became evident that Mexico either could continue servicing its debt or continue growing. It could not do both. Mr. de la Madrid chose prudence: a moderate, medium-term restructuring of the economy, continued interest payments and a new recession for the second half of 1985. The bottom line is that without substantial new lending or a sharp cut in debt service - from around 55 percent of export earnings to around 25 percent — the Mexican economy cannot grow. And without growth, which Mexico has experienced uninterruptedly since 1940, it is only a matter of time before the country's political stability is brought into question. But new funds, even if they were available in sufficient quantity not be an exception. (which is doubtful), would only postpone the problem, compounding it: New debts this year mean more interest to pay next year and every year

overhaul of the Mexican economy is necessary, it is far from certain that World Bank and U.S. conditionality would facilitate that overhaul. The de la Madrid administration already has begun implementing many of the reforms in question: a liberalization of foreign investment restrictions; a lowering of the protectionist walls around Mexican industry, a cutback in the state-owned sector.

And already Mr. de la Madrid is feeling the political heat. He has roused many nationalist and "statist" demons. If, in addition, the reforms are perceived as being the result of pressure, that heat may become unbearable. Very little can be achieved in Mexico without U.S. support; even less can be done if that support is too obtrusive. In this sense, the Baker plan may make a difficult situation worse. The earthquakes that struck Mexico City on Sept. 19-20 offered an opportunity for the United States to help Mexico find its way out of the debt crisis in a realistic long-term manner: by convincing private U.S. banks that the only way for Mexico to avoid paying no interest later is to pay less interest now. Instead, Mr. Baker came up with a quick fix; new loans to meet payments, new interest to be paid next year, new reforms to make things seem "structural," Missed opportunities are the stuff major crises are made of: Mexico will

Soviet Appears to Be Searching for Way To Redefine Its Relationship With Israel

By William Claiborne Washington Post Service

ERUSALEM — As at least three Warsaw Pact nations inched closer toward restoring some diplomatic links with Israel, the Soviet Union appeared to be searching for a way to redefine its relationship with the Jewish state in order to become a player in the arena of Middle East peace negotiations.

That was the assessment of senior Israeli foreign policy advisers here and of Western diplomats in Moscow and Warsaw. However, many of the diplomats cautioned against expecting any early breakthrough either in a resto-ration of the Soviet-Israeli diplomatic ties, which were severed in 1967, or in any large-scale increase in Jewish emigration from the Soviet Press reports here and in Europe of secret deals involving the imminent transfer of up to 20,000 Soviet Jews to Israel could be part of a Soviet campaign to defuse the emigration issue before the Geneva meeting between President Ronald Reagan and the Soviet leader, Mikhail S. Gorbachev, diplomatic sources in Moscow and Israeli officials said.

The Israeli officials insisted that there is no basis for optimism about a change in Soviet emigration policy and characterized reports of a pending Moscow-Tel Aviv airlift of Soviet Jews as "wishful thinking."

Less amorphous, however, have been diplomatic contacts suggesting that Soviet bloc countries, with Soviet approval, are moving toward re-establishing low-level diplomatic relations

Poland and Israel already have agreed to restore limited ties and soon will announce the opening of interest sections in Warsaw and Tel Aviv, according to government officials in Jerusalem and in Warsaw. Romania currently is the only Soviet bloc country with ties to Israel. The Israeli foreign minister, Yitzhak Shamir, who met at the United Nations last month with his counterparts from Poland, Hungary and Bulgaria, said last week that he had received signals from two East European countries in addition to Poland that they, too, were interested in strengthening ties with Israel.

While Mr. Shamir would not name the two countries, they are widely presumed to be Hungary and Bulgaria, Scharansky and Andrei D. Sakharov, and the issuance of an exit visa to Mr. Sakharov's wife, Yelena G. Bonner, have fueled speculation that the Kremlin is on the edge of relaxing relations with Israel. Diplomats here cautioned, however, that the reports could be the result of pre-summit meeting maneuvering.

Middle East, according to Israeli officials and Western and Middle East diplomats in Moscow. In his speech to the UN General Assembly last month, the Israeli prime minister, Shimon Peres, suggested that the Soviet Union could participate in an international forum to initiate Middle East peace talks if it re-established diplomatic relations with Israel. However, the usually well-informed Soviet journalist Victor Louis said that restoration of relations with Israel and Soviet participation in Middle East peace talks were viewed in the Kremlin as separate issues. Noting that the Soviet Union was the first nation to recognize Israel in 1948, Mr. Louis told the Israeli newspaper Ma'ariv that he would not rule out the possibility of a renewal of

"But," Mr. Louis was quoted as saying, "Mr. Peres must not present an ultimatum that if the Soviet Union does not restore relations, it won't be allowed to take part in Middle East peace negotiations. # Justice Brennan: In Fighting Trim

U.S. High Court's Strong Liberal Voice Is Louder Than Ever

ASHINGTON — Six years ago, Justice William J. Brennan Jr. of the U.S. Supreme Court appeared to be a tired 73-year-old - despondent, frail and thinking Quitting is the last thing on his mind today.

Justice Brennan is his ebullicant former self: working the crowd at a reception, dancing the night away at a party, traveling to Europe and around the United States.

Now, his friends talk not so much about his retirement, but the renaissance of Justice Bren-

His rejuvenation could not have come at a more opportune time as far as liberals are concerned. The court is under persistent attack by President Ronald Reagan and Attorney General Edwin Meese 3d. The attacks are receiving increased attention ecause Justice Brennan, and more recently, Justice John Paul Stevens, appear to be fighting back in speeches of their own. Such exchanges between the executive branch and Supreme Court justices are rare, particularly for Justice Brennan, a low profile, behind-the-scenes court consensus-builder all his life.

The central topic of the debate —how strictly courts must adhere to the specific intentions of the 18th-century framers of the U.S. Constitution - is fundamental to American govern-

More importantly, Justice Brennan's allies off the court and out of government are counting on him to continue leading the resistance within the court to erosion of the precedents of the Earl Warren court, which conservatives regard as prime examples of judicial activism.

OR five years, observers have been predicting that four or more vacancies would open on the court, giving Mr. Reagan the opportunity to reshape it well into the 21st century. So far there has been one vacancy: Justice Sandra Day O'Connor succeeded Potter Stewart, who retired.

Justice Brennan's vigor suggests that he, like his 76-year-old ally, Justice Thurgood Marshall, will leave only when he has no choice. Few men still living have played as important a role as Justice Brennan in creating and maintaining the legacy of the Warren court. He is viewed with begrudging admiration even by those who disagree most strongly with his re-As the conservative National Review maga-

The hounce is back in his sten, several former clerks and friends noted, and those who have seen him recently say Justice Brennan has put on weight - despite daily stints on his exercise bicycle - and is feeling "very feisty."

This role was not predicted when President Dwight D. Eisenhower appointed a state Su-preme Court justice from New Jersey to the U.S. Supreme Court in 1956.

He never was considered to be at the far end of the liberal spectrum during the Warren court, but rather was the pragmatic coalition-builder, often in the center of a shifting activist majority with the former justices Hugo Black and William O. Douglas to his left. He made a major impact in that role. Justice Brennan wrote the landmark 1964 opinion in New York Times vs. Sullivan saying that the press could not be sued for false statements unless those statements were deliberately made. In that case, Justices Black, Douglas and Arthur Goldberg argued a more revolutionary concept that newspapers should never be sued by public officials for libel. In 1962 Justice Brennan authored the famous Baker vs. Carr "one-man, one vote" ruling, which for the first time inserted the federal court into what previously had been considered a political preserve.

Justices Black, Douglas and Goldberg are gone. The court has shifted to the right, leaving Justice Marshall, who joined in 1967, and Jostice Brennan often isolated.

majority opinions in the 1960s, he dissents regu-larly now. Where he wrote ground-freaking rulings in the Warren court, his task of late has been more to forge a coalition to limit erosion of those rulings under Chief Justice Warren F.

N July, Mr. Meese, speaking to the Amencan Bar Association, condemned some of the court's famous civil rights and civil liberties decisions, saying that recent rulings on church-state separation "would have struck the founding generation as somewhat bizarre.

Mr. Meese said the justices should stick to the literal words of the Constitution and the intentions of the constitution of the constitution and the intentions of the constitution and the intentions of the constitution and the intentions of the constitution and the intention of the constitution and the constitution an tions of its authors "as the only reliable guide. No current Supreme Court Justice so clearly represents the judicial philosophy that Mr. Meese took on in that speech. Justice Brennan, in his own speech Oct. 12 to about 200 teachers and school administration. and school administrators, appeared to be responding. Without mentioning Mr. Meese's name, Justice Brenaan said that such views were "arrogance cloaked as humility" and simply hid a political bias against the rights of minorities.

Justice Breman's remarks were interpreted widely as a veried reply specifically to Mr. Messe, in fact, the specific was drafted in May, two moths before Mr. Messe spoke, and the agreement that the most specific was specifically to Mr. general topic was selected by his hosts. According to sources, Justice Brennan did not regard the speech as anything out of the ordinary, and was reported to be astounded at the attention it got, since he felt he had said it all

Indeed, he has been waging war against the Reagan-Meese-Burger judicial philosophy for years, perticularly on the conservative idea that modern courts should interpret the Constitution as it might be interpreted by the founders of the

Wichita Basks Under International Spotlight As Americans, Foreigners Sing Praises of City

By Scott Kraft Los Angeles Times Service

ICHITA, Kansas — It began as a simple Chamber of Commerce songwriting contest to get Wichitans excited about Wichita. But now, to the surprise of city boosters, 2,500 armchair songwriters in every U.S. state and nine foreign countries are singing

The problem is that most of the composers writing tunes such as "I Left My Heart in Wichita" and "Take Me Back to Wichita, Kansas" have never laid eyes on the place.

"Tell me," one recent caller asked, "just what does Wichita look like?" To hear some of the nonnative lyricists tell it, Wichita is a city of towering smokestacks, sunflower-lined streets, corsetted women, pulsating neon lights and backyard oil wells. A place where, as one Californian wrote, "even with its spring tornadoes, you can still grow your potatoes.

Others more accurately describe an aircraft manufacturing center in the heart of wheat and cattle country where the people are friendly, the air is clean and the streets are safe.

Soon after the Chamber of Commerce invited Wichita people to write a song for its annual meeting, and offered a $1,500 cash prize, songs started flooding in. "I don't know much about Wichita, but, it writing this, I've become very fond of it," said Joan Rogers, a housewife in England who wrote Oaks, California, focused on Wichita's family problem:

Did you ever see such a ma! She raised us right in Wichita, Fed us beef and wheat and beans, Sunflower seeds and collard greens. Taught us manners and right from wrong And made us learn to sing this song.

Among the foreign musical tributes are ones from Kildare, Ireland, and Brisbane, Australia. The composers include students, real estate agents, ministers and even professional musi-

The city of 280,000 is enjoying the kind of image-raising that money could not buy.

"We've tried hundreds of times to raise the profile of Wichita," said Dorothy Schmitt. a chamber vice president. Now, she said, "we have realized millions of dollars," worth of publicity.

A 'Homecoming' For Country Music

By Michael Zwerin

PARIS — Country music may e coming back home. It originated with European folk songs brought to North America by immigrants. As they moved inland, their old songs became an increasingly essential cultural tie with the mother country and each other. Square dances replaced reels, fiddies replaced bagpipes. The migra-tion continued west towards Mexico, guitars appeared. It came to be called country and western, west-ern swing, and bluegrass, and there were other offshoots as it evolved into the only significant form of American popular music not based primarily on African roots. It was also called "White Blues."

While the blues moved to Memphis and Chicago, cross-bred and fused into urban music reaching millions, country music remained in the country. These people did not like cities, and city people called it hillbilly music. The songs were about basics like family, farming and God. Bred in remote valleys, plains and hills, there was limmedia access. It was considered corny, unsuitable for export to urban centers, let alone

During World War II. country folks went north for work, then northerners came south for the sun. Then came the folk boom, Dylan's "Nashville Skyline," country-rock groups like the Engles. By the late 1970s, polished in the commercial mill, country music constituted 50 percent of the pop music market. Nashville grew to rival New York and Los Angeles as a business center. At that point, there seemed no need for export. But it leveled off in the 1980s, and though platinum al-bums by the likes of Dolly Parton and Kenny Rogers still sell less than 5,000 copies in most European nations, the territory is opening up. # Pam Gems Revises 'Camille': Pure Love — of Money By Michael Billington

LONDON — It is a brave drama-tist who offers us a new ver-sion of "Camille" with the image of Garbo drifting through satin-quilt-ed sets in the MGM movie still powerfully strong. But, undaunted, Pam Gents has come up with her revision of the play by Dumas fils and as a result, which the Royal spins the plot in Gems's rewrite of this romantic classic. Marguerite Gautier is seen as a working-girl who has made good as a high-class Parisian courtesan. When she gives up her lover, Armand, it is because Armand's aristocratic father offers education and social position to the son she has earlier had by him. And although Marguerite and Armand are re-united, their relationship is finally capsized by her willingness to fleece a Russian prince to pay for their escape to Italy. The point is absolutely clear: a pure love such as that between Marguerite and Armand cannot survive in a society based on commercial transaction. If I call the play unfocused, it is because Dumas's old story of a doomed love doesn't quite square with Gems's stress on economic reality and the changes she has made to the story make it more, not less, melodramatic. It is not merely stretching but dislocating the long arm of coincidence to make both Armand and his father lovers of Marguerite (does Armand know about this earlier liaison? it is never quite clear). Even more crucially, there is something bogus about the notion of a pure love corrupted by bit dubious, she has created a wonderful star-role in Camille (as she did in "Piaf"), which Frances Barber seizes ravenously. George Jean Nathan once described one actress's "Camille" as "The first I into visionary pacifism with Yoko have ever seen who died of catarrh." The same could not be said of Barber, who has a horrendous tubercular cough. But, more than that, she captures the character's fierce love of possessions ("My things, my lovely things"), her teas-ing, taming sexuality and her pas-sion: when her son is taken from her, it is as if a limb had been lopped off. She takes the stage by storm rather than default and Ron Daniel's production (filled with Liszt and Chopin music) is un-ashamedly theatrical and well acted by a large cast, including Nicholas Farrell as an impulsive, heavy-jawed Armand and Polly James as a high-class madam under whose silken finery there beats an

It suggests Lennon had finally discovered himself when he was tragically shot. But what it leaves out of account is the equally welldocumented other side of Lennon: the caustic wit, the personal cruelty, the drug-addiction that had a profound effect on his music and his life. Lennon was a bundle of contradictions, none of which are explained in this sanitized show. Bob Eaton's script doesn't have a while Lennon's later songs were expressing an ideal of impoverished numan brotherhood ("Imagine No Possessions") Yoko Ono's shrewd business-sense was making him richet than ever. the moment is to be found, as so often, at the tiny Bush Theatre in west London. The play is "Tarongh the Leaves" by the 39-year-old Barry Naver Yaver varian dramatist Franz Xaver Kroetz, and it has been brought to London, in Jenny Killick's production, from the equally small, presti-gious Traverse Theatre in Edinburgh. If one says it is about a sad affaire between a 40ish female of-fal-merchant (Martha) and a gross. coarse, drunken factory-hand (Otto), one makes it sound desperately unattractive. But Kroetz writes about his characters with such total respect and depicts their lives with such luminous realism that the result is a small masterpiece: very similar in its impact to the best films of Rainer Werner Fassbinder, for whose theater Kroetz in fact, wrote.

Kroetz depicts two ordinary people trapped both by their own needs and by a society that preserves the notion of male superiority. Martha is lonely, desperate for love but proud of her earning-

19th-century money-mania. What, ica accompaniment, and "Hard in this version, undoes Marguerite and Armand is not money but the lack of it: if Armand had possessed the happy advent of the I instruction."

In this version, undoes Marguerite and Armand is not money but the lack of it: if Armand had possessed the happy advent of the I instruction. Martha's independence and superior income. The point is clear. But what makes the play so ununerable what makes the play so untiliserably moving is Kroetz's ability to the press his ideas theathcally. The way Martha scrubs Otto's back tells you all you need to know about her yielding decorate and the about her yielding devotion and the brutal way he rejects the quarter watch she gives him as a britidal present speaks volumes about male lear of direct emotion.

Smithsonian to Build Hall On 'Information Revolution'

By Irvin Moiotsky New York Times Service

WASHINGTON — The Smithsonian Institution has announced plans for an exhibition hall that will trace the "information revolution" from its beginnings in the 19th century to today's sophisticated computers, and that will track new developments in communication.

The exhibition hall will be installed initially in the Smithsonian's National Museum of American History, but officials indicated that a separate museum of information and communication might be built one day.

Robert McC. Adams, secretary. of the Smithsonian, said at a news conference: "If the subject is as important as we think it is, the time may well come when a separate museum may evolve.

"Certainly this will focus on the computer but will also go back to the inventions of the 19th century," Adams said of the new exhibition. Such inventions as the telegraph, the camera began the information the largest in the world.

revolution and will receive prominent attention, he said. The exhibition half will cost an estimated $4.3 million, take five years to build, and occupy 12,000 square feet (about 1,000 square meters), he said.

Adams said that financing for the permanent exhibition would be solicited from business and private donors because the amount was beyoud the Smithsonian's present capabilities and it was considered an nappropriate time to ask Congress for money.

The "information revolution," Adams said, was comparable only to such things as the Industrial Revolution and Gutenherg's invention of movable type. Such events, he said, occur only once in several

Adams said that the new hall would enhance the existing Smithsonian collection of computation the telephone, the phonograph, and artifacts, which he said was already

N.Y. Stocks End at Record High

NEW YORK — Prices on the New York Stock Exchange rallied sharply in the final hour of trading Tuesday to push the Dow Jones industrial average to its third record close in five The blue-chip index rose 6.99, to finish at Broader indicators also advanced. The New York Stock Exchange index climbed 0.62, to 111.07, and the Standard & Poor's-500 stock index advanced 1.12 to 192.37. The price of an average share rose 20 cents.

Advances outpaced declines by a 2-1 ratio, and volume rose to 119.2 million shares from 104.9 million on Monday. Market participants said stocks took a cue from continued strength in the bond market. Robert Kahan, head of equity trading at Montgomery Securities, said the market will continue to move higher.

"There's a lot of cash on the sidelines, a tremendous demand for stocks and a lack of supply. Mr. Kahan said. "The interest rate environment is clearly improving; rates are going down."

Charles Jensen, of MKI Securities, said that, "The market's tone was good and volume accelerated." Other traders noted that the market was able to climb despite some sporadic selling in the blue chips as the Dow approached 1,400. In the credit markets, however, some participants were sounding a cautious note on interest rates. George Kegler, senior vice president at A. Webster Dougherty & Co. in Philadelphia said that after its three-week rally, the bond market is vulnerable to disappointment.

"Interest rates have fallen lower than what current Federal Reserve monetary policy and economic data warrant," Mr. Kegler said. He said rates could rise if there is "any disappointing news on the deficit reduction efforts of the administration and Congress."

the play is but Caroline Roberts, director of training and organizational de velopment with Young & Ru-bicam Ltd. in London, the British subsidiary of the U.S. advertising agency, asked her Surfaces while Standary company to move her back to London after spending 6½ years in New York and 3½ years in Brussels.

After being back in London for two months, she believes that it was a good career move. But she is finding it difficult to readjust to England after 10 years abroad.

"The problem is that you are not coming home at all," says Ms.

nation Revolution, Roberts. "Going abroad I knew my limitations. Moving back home, you think you know your way around but you don't."

SYCHOLOGISTS in the United States and Britain call it re-entry stress. After a few years abroad, returnees find themselves strangers in their own country. They often try to fit back into the community they had left but no longer have the same frame of reference that their friends have. The country has changed and so have they. They may start to feel isolated, lonely and depressed.

"Re-entry stress is a type of extreme exhaustion caused by coping with a high level of novelty in your environment which you think you know something about but which, in fact, is totally new to you," says Sharon A. Zukanckas, a U.S. behavioral psychologist who is managing director of Health Connections, a London-based health-consultancy firm.

Clyde Austin, professor of psychology at Abilene Christian University in Abilene, Texas, has counseled 600 clients who were experiencing re-entry stress. He described the phenomenon this way: "The biggest problem is that expectations are not met. You don't think you are going to have problems but you do. As a result you feel a sense of loss and nostalgia."

There is no empirical data linking the physiological and psychological disorders normally attributed to stress, such as heart disease and alcoholism, to re-entry stress per se. Diplomatic services, the armed forces and multinationals have been more concerned with stress caused by working overseas. These instimtions, which send large numbers of people overseas every year, usually believe that returnees can well handle going home.

But the U.S. Navy, some psychologists and some companies are realizing that those returning may need help. The Charter ducting a research project with 50 expatriate couples on the tension caused by coming home as well as going abroad.

The Center for International Briefing at Farnham Castle in England is surveying European multinationals to ask them whether they would pay for their returning executives to attend seminars to help them adjust to home again. Farnham Castle is a major European briefing center for executives going overseas." Staying in touch with friends and keeping informed about what is going on at home can help reduce re-entry stress.

"The attitude we took is, 'Let's take this like moving to a new country," says Just Donker, an account director in Amsterdam with the Dutch subsidiary of Young & Rubicam. # U.K. Bank Asked for Tin Loan

LME Supports Rescue Plan

LONDON -- The London Metal Exchange called Tuesday on the Bank of England to back a bankers' plan drawn up in an effort to solve he world tin crisis.

The LME board chairman, Jacques Lion, said that the central bank should provide a loan to the 16 [mancia] institutions that on Monday had proposed a refinancing package for the laternational Tin Council, the producers' and consumers' group that said on Oct.
24 that it no longer had the money to support tin prices.
The ITC's withdrawal from the market prompted the LME to sus-pend trading until a solution was found to the crisis, which has threatened the linancial health of traders, mines and tin-producing pations. Trading also was suspended on the Kuala Lumpur metals exchange, and the U.S. General Services Administration has stopped quoting tin prices, The 14 banks and two metals trading firms, which are owed hundreds of millions of dollars by the ITC, said that they would defer for 12 months repayment of principal and interest owed to them if ITC's 22 member nations provide a fresh injection of cash and guarantee its loans outstanding.

Mr. Lion called on the Bank of England to extend a bridging loan to the financial institutions once members had given backing for the ITC but before they had pledged debt guarantees, which he said could prove difficult for some producing countries.

Dealers fear that if the ITC had to reduce or even abolish its tin--buying program when trading re-sumed, prices could fall by as much as 50 percent from the level of £8,140 a metric ton ($11,729 per 1.1 short tons) when business was sus-

Unemployment Rate Dips 0.1% In W. Germany

NUREMBERG - West German unemployment in October remained well above the 2.1 million level despite a slight improvement during the month in the number of people holding jobs, the federal Labor Office said Tuesday.

In another report Tuesday, the trial production fell a provisional 0.2 percent in September after dropping a revised 3.2 percent a month earlier. The ministry had

Total unemployment during the month, however, was the highest for an October since the period of postwar reconstruction in the late 1940s. It was around 4,000 higher than October 1984, officials said.

The agency also said that the number of workers placed on cur-tailed shifts rose by 25,107 during the month, to 126,860. And the number of unfilled jobs dropped 4.983, to 112.045.

Herarich Franke, president of the Labor Office, said he expected "somewhat better prospects on the employment front" next year. He did not elaborate.

Meanwhile, the economics ministry said that its production index fell to 102.2 in September from

The balance would be received in in 1987, he said.

The government has announced plans to sell part of its interest in ax companies, including Luithansa, the national airline, before the end of the present parliament.

Mr. Stoltenberg said he did not rule out part privatization of Salzgitter AG, the steel and engineering group, in the next legislative period beginning early in 1987. Salzgitter is expected to break even next year after heavy losses.

Government sources said that Bonn expected to sell stakes in Viag AG, an aluminum, chemicals and energy group, and Prakla-Seismos GmbH, an energy expionation company, next year. Bonn will cut its 87.4-percent stake in Ving by at least a quarter and have the company listed on bourses, sources said.

The government's plans for Prakla-Scismos, in which it has a direct 95-percent stake, are less clear, but it will initially retain a substantial holding, sources said.

SEC Begins Insider-Trading Probe

By Steve Coll and David Vise

Washington Part Service
WASHINGTON — The U.S. Securities and Exchange Commission said that it has launched a series of investigations into insider trading by professionals who delib-erately spread false takeover infor-mation and then profit from the wild swings in stock prices.

The SEC's enforcement director, Gary Lynch, called the recent stock price activity "unsettling." Mr. Lynch, who disclosed the agency investigations Monday in an interview, said that he was particularly alarmed when rumors, rather than news events and other public dis-ansed sharp hourly fluctuations in the price of some stocks, such as

see if we can get to the bottom of it. "There were six companies that were the subject of takeover rumors one day and their stocks moved up appreciably," he said. "That week there were over 20 stocks subject to takeover rumors."

Mr. Lynch also said that the SEC is in the midst of more than 35 investigations of insider trading. Wall Street sources said that

The Saudi American Bank is scheduled to open its first international branch on November 8th, 1985.

This branch, which will be in Istanbul, will be the first commercial Saudi Bank in Turkey.

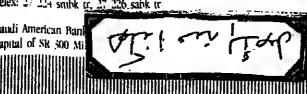

The presence of the Saudi American Bank in Turkey would serve to make the financial flows between Turkey and Saudi Arabia much faster and more efficient. Equally important, it would serve to develop and increase the trade and investment flows between Turkey and the whole Region which the Saudi American Bank serves and represents.

With its fully computerized operations in Turkey, the branch will be able to continue with Saudi American Bank's already proven performance as one of the most efficient banks in Saudi Arabia, the Arab countries and the world at large.

The Saudi American Bank is confident that the technological and managerial resources it is putting into Turkey will make it able to serve as the effective link for all business between Turkey and Saudi Arabia as well as the whole Middle East with Fortune and Business Week, Forbes was judged to be overall favorite by 44%, versus 29% for Business Week and 19% for Fortune.

When regular readers were asked which of the three reflects best the excitement of business, Forbes had twice the scores of the other two. And when asked which of the three stands for "free enterprise," 71% named Forbes, compared with 13% for Fortune and 7% for Business

These results confirm surveys done over the past fifteen years showing that more officers in big business read Forbes regularly than either Fortune or Business Week.

As the graphs so eloquently show, Forbes is the most cost-effective business magazine for reaching America's most effective executives. If you want to make an impression on this elite, not only is it good busi ness for you to put your

BMW Net Rose 12.4%, Fueled by Foreign Sales

MUNICH — Bayerische Mo-toren Werke AG reported Tuesday and sales gained 13,5 percent to that parent company revenue rose 12.4 percent in the first nine months of 1985, fueled largely by foreign sales.

Revenue for the three quarters was 10.36 billion Deutsche marks ($3.99 billion). Sales increased 13.4 percent to 13.50 billion DM from the 1984 period,

ITT Earnings Fell 33.4% in Quarter

NEW YORK - ITT Corp., the diversified technology and services company, says its third-quarter earnings fell 33.4 percent from a year earlier, to $77 million, or 50 cents a share, from $115.6 million, or 77 cents a share, in the third quarter of 1984. Revenue rose to $4.9 billion from a restated $4.7 billion a year earlier.

However, last year's third quarter reflected a nonrecurring gain of $54.7 million from the acquisition of ICL PLC by Standard Tele-phone & Cables PLC, an ITT affiliate. Excluding the one-time gain, income for the 1985 third quarter rose 27 percent.

Nine-month earnings rose to $308.3 million, or $2.03 a share, com $273.2 million, or $1.81 a share, a year earlier, ITT said.

Mr. Küenheim also said that he expects world group sales to rise to more than 18 billion DM in 1985 from 16.48 billion DM last year. The automaker did not provide world group figures for the first nine months.

The chairman also forecast that parent company sales will be just under 16 billion DM, compared with 12.93 billion DM last year, he added.

BMW had a record parent net profit of 329.6 million DM in 1984. Mr. Küenheim said 1985 results may not top those of last year be-cause of higher depreciation connected with deferred investment caused by the seven-week metal-

Murdoch Says Stock Offer May Fund Metromedia Buy

New York Times Service

WASHINGTON -- Rupert Mordoch has told the Federal Communications Commission that the company he created to purchase a group of television stations from Metromedia Inc. may offer stock to the public to help raise funds to finance the $1.55-billion takeover. It would be the first public offering in the United States of stock in a company controlled by the international publisher, although some bonds held by his 20th Century-Fox Film Corp, are publicly held. The possibility of a public stock sale was among the general details of a capitalization plan for Mr. Murdoch's company, News America Television Inc., which has proposed to purchase seven and return six television outlets that reach 22 percent of the U.S. viewing audience. The stations include those in major markets such as New York City, Washington, Chicago, Dallas and Los Angeles.

Monday's filing with the FCC, which must approve the proposed acquisition, was seen by industry and government analysis as a response to the FCC's decision last week to postpone final action on the Metromedia acquisition proposal, But Howard Squadron counsel to Mr. Murdoch, denied that this was the reason for the filing.

The commission dropped the Metromedia acquisition proposal from its agenda for last week amid objections from members of Congress and broadcast activists who argued that Mr. Murdoch had provided insufficient financial data about his proposed purchase and had no detailed plan for disposing of properties to comply with the FCC's ownership rules.

The data filed with the commission on Monday said that News America would issue six million common shares with a par value of one cent. All of the common stock would be held by Twentieth Holdings Corp., of which Mr. Murdoch's New America Holdings has

In addition, News America would issue 1.15 million of 1.25 million authorized shares of nonvoting preferred stock, all of which would be offered to holders of Metromedia bonds as part of a 50-percent cash, 50-percent stock swap offer,

Holders of the preferred would be allowed to elect two additional directors to the three-member board of News America if the equivalent of six full quarterly dividends had been accrued but not paid, the filing said. The two directors would go off the board once the dividends were paid,

Apple Plans Move Into Mainstream

NEW YORK - Apple Computer Inc., saving that it had regained its footing after the most tumpituous year in its history, has outlined a plan to integrate its products into an "IBM-defined world" of computer systems.

The company said the move marked a bread refocusing that some Apple officials conceded would concentrate less on flashy new technologies and more on making machines attractive to businesses.

In a presentation to Wall Street analysis, Apple predicted on Monday that its restructuring earlier this year would allow it to post "significantly stronger" earnings in fiscal 1986 than in the 1985 year, ended Sept. 27. The company re-ported 1985 earnings of $61.2 mil-tion, down from $54.1 million a

Dupont's mastery of the intricate craft of Chinese lacquering using natural ingrodients and the andent competence is so formidable that lacquer schools send students to learn how they develop new colors and designs

The company spends an astonishing nine percent of numover on maintaining quality. One out of five lacquer lighters is rejected for flaws "absolutely imperceptible to the consumer - and sometimes even to me," says Doucet. The mechanical parts are recuperated and the product destroyed.

"If you start milding concessions, you no longer have quality." he says, "and quality is our religion." This desire for perfection has won the firm, a subsidiary of Gillette since 1972, a 55 percent share

Dunng the Second World War a shortage of precious materials set the company to adapting an accessory created for the Maharajah of Panala who had ordered 30 cases fitted with solid gold lighters Made in aluminum during the war, the lighter has evolved into roday's covered emblem of prestige in ! silver, gold or Chinese lacquer.

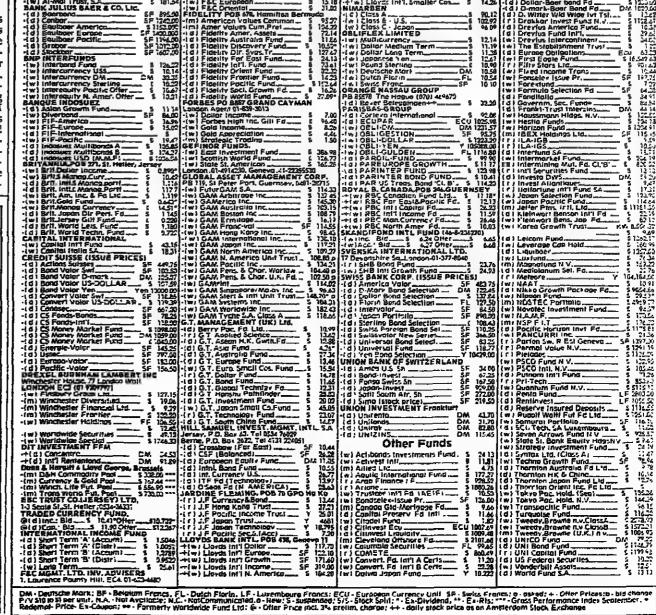

Now Dupont is launching a new smaller, slimmer version of the famous lighter. Produced in designs F ranging from kinetic compositions in paladium and gold to art-deco inspired decors of Chinese larguer. this new bijou lighter will continue to proclaim the immutable Dupont tenets of beauty and flawless !! quality.

On October 16, 1985, SCOA's board of directors approved the interim financial statements for the first six months of 1985. The volume of business handled by the Group in the first half of the year reached 7.5 billion francs and consolidated earnings came to 28.1 million francs on sales of 4.382 million francs. The Group's share of the consolidated earnings was 15,9 million francs. SCOA S.A. sostained a loss of 8,9 million francs. The 1985 first-half figures are compared with the figures for the nine month period ended on June 30, 1984 below (the preceding fiscal period was 15 months long):

June 30, 1985 June 30, 1984 4.382 M.F. Consolidated sales 5.697 M.F. Consolidated result + 28.4 M.F. -41. - M.F. + 15,9 M.F. - 56,4 MLF. SCOA S.A. - 8.9 M.F. --- ól. - M.F. As in 1984, the results of the latter half of 1985 will be strongly influenced by the last quarter's operations dependent mainly on the seasonal distribution sector and on shipments of commercial vehicle components to Nigerian. There are reasonable prospects of those shipments, which have practically been cut off since 1984, in the near future. Subject to ratification at the next annual shareholders' meeting, the board coopted Mesars AL MANSOUR. To Cut 5,000 Workers The Associated Press

TOKYO — Hitachi Zosen Corp., a leading Japanese ship-builder, said Tuesday that it planned to cut 5,000 people from its work force of 17,000 by March 1987 because of an industry slump.

Hitachi's management recently presented the plan to unions, which are expected to respond later this month, the company said. The plan calls for moving up the mandatory retirement age to 58 from 60, transferring, some workers to affiliate companies and helping others find companies and helping others find

Creditors Appoint Liquidator For Sinclair Vehicles Inc.

The Associated Press

COVENTRY, England — Creditors of Sinclair Vehicles Ltd., which developed and marketed an electric tricyle recently, said Tuesday that they have appointed a liquidator — Christopher Morris, who also acted as liquidator for defunct Laker Airways.

Press Association, the British domestic news agency, said that Mr. Morris will sell what he can of the company's remaining assets, which consist mainly of about 4,800 unsold electric tricycles, known as the C5. The total debt of the company, now renamed TPD Ltd., is put at £6.4

company, now renamed TPD Ltd., is put at £6.4 million ($9.2 million), the news agency said. Sir Clive Sinclair, the British inventor who designed the three-wheeled, one-seater, is owed £5.9 million by the company, the association said.

How DSM keeps the world's farmers from grumbling

KEEPING the world's farmers from grumbling is a thankless task but at DSM we do try. As one of the world's leading fertiliser producers UKF, members of the DSM Fertilisers Division, has more than a passing interest in the land ... six million tonnes a year to be exact, improving crops and yields and life styles.

AS ONE of the world's top ten chemical groups we are a vital and ambitious company with product and capital expansion plans running into the twenty-first century. To achieve these ambitions DSM seeks out the brightest of talents. More than one hundred graduates join us every year to keep up the momentum of our research into new technologies.

Our secure financial base ensures that we have the means to match our ambitions and those of the farming communities for generations to come.

- leave it to the professionals.

Dollar Falls to 4½-Year Low Against Yen

NEW YORK - The dollar fell Ton Tuesday to a 56-month low against the yen despite an easing of Japanese interest rates, but rose seamst all other major currencies.

Dealers said that market sentiment toward the U.S. currency had named less bearish in the absence of new steps by central banks to push it down.

Some demand shead of further U.S. Treasury refinancings helped the dollar's undertone while a higher U.S. federal funds rate and higher Enrodollar rates also gave the currency support, dealers said. People feel the dollar has come

Variety of New Issues Emerge; Secondary Trading is Moderate

By Christopher Pizzey

LONDON — The Euroboad market was dominated Tuesday by activity in the primary sector that saw a variety of new issues emerging during the day, dealers said. Trading in the secondary market was only moderate with dollar straights and floating-rate notes tending to show only slight changes from Monday.

The day started with two further perpetual floating-rate notes that rank as primary capital under Bank of England guidelines. National Westumster Bank PLC launched a $500-million note paying ¼ point over the three-month London interbank bid rate, which some dealers viewed as being a little right.

The issue was lead-managed by National Westminster's merchant bank subsidiary, County Bank Lid., and ended on the when-issued market bid at 99.75 against the 25-basis-point total fees.

Traders noted that the bank's last perpetual - a two-tranche arrangement totaling $1 billion launched last May - paid 4 point over the mean of the six-month London interbank bid and offered rates. "That goes to prove how right margins have since become on perpetuals," one dealer commented. The Bank of Ireland launched a $100-million perpetual paying ¼ point over the three-month London interbank offered rate. It was led by E.F. Hutton & Co. (London) Ltd. and was quoted at 99.17 bid on the when-issued market compared with the total fees of 100 basis points.

old English-speaking son has found it a bit difficult to learn Dutch. Usually, according to returnees, friends and relatives don't extend as much support to executives coming home as they do at the original move overseas: They don't realize how difficult the return can be.

"We went back expecting our friends to be only temporarily interested in our experience overseas. The possibility of re-entry stress has been softened by the fact they have been genuinely interested in our experience abroad," says Dick Wilson, administration manager for U.S. field operations at Hewlett-Packard Co. FOREIGN LAND By Jonathan Raban. 352 pages. $16.95. Viking Inc., 40 West 23d Street, New York,

N. Y. 10010. By Michiko Kakutani

GEORGE GREY, the hero of Jonathan Raban's new novel, has spent the better part of his life on the road—moving from city to city, country to country, one set of rented rooms to another. He believes that "the safest way to live was to assume that your marching orders would arrive tomorrow," and, having lived so many years "a lodger in other people" lived so many years "a lodger in other people's houses," he has "picked up the lodger's habit of passing through without leaving tracks. He'd been born in a rectory that belonged to the Church and gone on to Navy quarters and Company apartments; and he left each billet exactly as he'd found it." If such a restless life has freed him from responsibilities, however, George has also begun to realize that it has made him a stranger to his family and friends made him a stranger to his family and friends
— he has become one of those unannounced, nervous-making guests who drop by in the night and then are gone the following morning. At 60, he decides to leave Born Porto, the small African nation where he has lived for the last few years, and return home to England.

George's travels give Raban lots of opportu-George's travels give Raban lots of opportunities to exercise his skills as a travel writer. In this novel, he conjures up post-colonial Africa with a few bright, Waugh-like strokes of color—"George liked Bom Porto's easygoing, festive Maxxist-Leninism," he writes. "The further you went into the Wolof, Negro interior of Montedor, the more the politics of the country lost their good humor." And yet the "foreign land" of the book's title refers less to this fictional Third World than to England — which strikes George, after his long absence, as which strikes George, after his long absence, as a baffling and unsettling place. He barely recognizes the lineaments of the green, pleasant land of his youth in the shabby, blighted country that greets him on his return.

In witty, acerbic prose, George's door im-pressions of England lend this novel a perspec-tive not unlike that of "The Kingdom by the Sea," Paul Theronx's recent book, which also treated Britain as a hostile, alien land.

The grubby boroughs of South London elicit comparisons with Africa: "It looked like a awless country. The blocks of workers' flats were dirtier, more sprawled and raggedy, than those of Accra and Dar es Salaam; there was more trash blowing in the streets than there was in Lagos." And the local television shows with their gossipy inside jokes strike him as the products of a distant, inscrutable culture. After the warm, soothing waters of Africa, the northern seas around England feel "thin, lightstarved," and the English gardens strike him as frowzy and browbeaten.

When it comes to conjuring up a supporting cast of characters in "Foreign Land," Rahan, sketches them in swiftly, creating forceful line drawings in a sentence or two. We meet the president of Bom Porto, "a genial pacific soul who'd once asked George if he knew the work of Baudelaire-Rimbaud, a singular poet whom George had decided to leave politely intact."

Sheila, the loving daughter turned feminist wit; Vera, the blase mistress who poses no threat because she is seeing another man, are drawn with humor and affection. But Raban's gift for characterization does not extend to George himself, and there is a jagged hole at the center of this book. The portions of "Foreign Land" that describe George from the outside are promising enough we catch glimpses of him as a man capable of great charm but unwilling to connect, writeone who wants to sell off his parents possessions at jumble sales, who learns about his daughter's pregnancy in the papers. "His boarding school and then the Navy had tripled him emotionally." Sheila thinks. "His couldn't express his feelings, even to himself this mutshell explanation, we are told, is This mushell explanation, we are told, is inadequate, and we read on, hoping to discover the deeper reasons for George's alienation. Those revelations, however, are never forth-coming. By the end of "Foreign Land," George is still a stranger, a traveler who passes through the pages of this book, as he passes through his life — without leaving tracks.

life - without leaving tracks. Michiko Kakutani is on the staff of The New York Times.

WERSTER'S NINTH NEW COLLEGIATE DICTIONARY

By Alan Truscott

ON the diagramed deal, North-South could not consider three no-trump with clubs wide open, so they were forced to choose between a 4-3 fit in one of the major suits and ne in diamonds. Five diamonds would have been a sensible contract, and would have succeeded. The declarer would be able to avoid a heart loser by end-playing West, barring an opening heart lead from East.

That unlikely event would make no difference, for the declarer would play diamond winners followed by spade winners, discarding the singleton club from the North hand. In practice, South landed in four spades and had a tricky control problem. He won the drew tramps. As planned, the second trick with the heart ace heart loser was discarded on after East had won the opening domany's last dismond for club lead and shifted to hearts, total of 10 tricks.

The declarer seized the opportunity to show that he is a skillful card player. His aimwas to discard his heart jack eventually on dummy's last di-amond, but that was easier said than done.

Any normal play fails as the cards lie, but South found an unusual safety play that was sure to succeed against any likely break. He led a diamond to dummy's acc and thought it to dummy's ace and thought it over. Then he led a low diamond, the key move.

West won and returned a diamond for his partner to ruff, But South was in full control. He won the heart return with the king, ruffed a cinb and

Soviet Men in Gymnastics Lead

MONTREAL - Despite the absence of its top performer, the Soviet Union dominated the men's team compulsories Monday on the opening day of the world gymnastics championships.

Led by consistently near-perfect scores by Vladimir Artemov, Yuri Korolev and Valentin Mogilnyi, the Russians racked up 293.15 out of a possible 300 points. The squad was missing its star, Dmitri Bilozerchev, who broke a leg in a car accident near Moscow on Oct. 17.

East Germany was second overall with 290.70 points, followed by Japan (290.25), China (289.45), West Germany (283.50), Hungary (283.05). Cuba (282.60) and the United States (281.85). The top individual performer

The U.S. team attributed its disappointing showing to jitters and a bad break. The Americans were forced to compete with only five men in three events after Daniel Hayden suffered a sprained ankle on the high bar. Hayden will be out for the duration of the weeklong competition.

"There was a lot of tension out there." said U.S. team member Tim Daggett, who finished tied for 15th. "When you have an injury like that, it's so difficult. In a sport like gymnastics, you need every man out

Daggett was inconsistent but still was the best on the U.S. squad with a score of 57.70. He had individual event scores ranging from 9.55 on the pommel horse and rings to 9.75 on the floor exercises.

Los Angeles, "Everybody is out to beat the U.S. now," Daggett said, "Without Hayden in there, we can have no mistakes. It's a lot of pressure to put on young guys. Unfor-tunately, we didn't deal that well with it in some circumstances."

Scott Johnson, who alone with Daggett competed in the Los Angeles Games, said the U.S. squad was shaky. "I don't think our confidence was as high as it could have been," be said. "I have to keep a positive attitude because one of our team members is out. We have to pull together as a team. The show is not over yet."

Teams are allowed to enter six competitors, with the top five scores counting toward team totals. U.S. coach Abie Grossfeld said the men's optional team exercises on Wednesday will be "tough, real tough" with only five men.

There are 363 athletes from 38 countries competing in the championships, which are held every two 1984 Olympics, felt the pressure of defending the team gold it won at Tuesday in the team compulsories.

Rudderless Brazil: Don't Panic Yet

LONDON - Dear Pelé: Nice to hear from you again. But can it be that you, the embodiment of Brazilian triumph of player in-stinct over coaching destructiveness, have joined the panic about your homeland's being without a soccer manager seven months before the World Cup?
You probably feel cut adrift in

New York, where the sham of pro soccer has died and film acting eats up your days. Yet your past mastery on the field remains so vivid. so important, that from Singapore to Stockholm to Soweto we receive your message in banner headlines.

"Fame," you say, "doesn't win matches, much less a World Cup." Without seeing you face to face, it's difficult to tell what your real cry of the heart is. Could it be that of an old player whose ambition of applying sporting fame toward a po-litical career are thwarted? And, instead, you find yourself in America, being used in the film role of Pedro, a smalltime crook. You comment that Brazil's lack of soccer preparation reflects the confused situation of the country. In sport it does that, and more. Whereas in your hevday soccer was truly the opiate of the masses, the second religion after Catholicism, its soul is now being de-

There are 28 Brazilians performing in Portugal, an exodus prompting the 1983 team manager, Carlos Alberto Parreira, to warn: "We can say goodbye to the 1986 World Cup already now the youngsters are going to Europe, too."

Parreira had a point, although he and other leading Brazilian coaches are quick enough to climb aboard the Arabian bandwagon.

Riding High, Piggott Starts Farewell Tour

By Ira Berkow New York Times Service

NEW YORK - The lad was teeped in jockeyship, as the British call it. He was brought up around British race tracks by his father, no surprise since the father was a famous jockey, as was his father before him. In fact, the family traces its riding back seven generations.

The boy was 12 when he rode in his first professional race, in 1948. That year he won his first race, at Haydock Park in Lancashire.

A pale, shy lad, he was tall for a - he would grow to be 5foot-8 (1.72 meters). He rode with stirrups high and back lowered; his knees seemed to abut his jaw. Astride his mount he resembled not so much Eddie Arcaro or Sir Gordon Richards - Britain's most famous jockey - but Ichabod Crane. Yet it was obvious early that Lester Piggott had a special talent Not only was he adept with the reins, but he had that certain toughness inherent in many outstanding athletes.

In fact, some considered him surly. They spoke to him and it seemed if he hadn't heard what they said. Often it turned out he hadn't. Piggott was deaf in one ear.

And when he spoke, he did so quietly, almost reluctantly, and you'd have to lend a close ear. You Piggott took the hearing impair-

In Britain, where one can hardly pass a belihop or chambermaid or housewife who doesn't have at least a few quid on a nag with their local turí accountant. Piggott became an idol of huge proportion. And he did 38-year career to maintain a weight it not because he spent hours on "chat shows" or was effusive with the gentlemen of Fleet Street. He did it by winning.

In 30 years, he has booted home 4,349 winners in Britain, second only to Richards. Abroad. he has won more than a thousand races. And he has won 28 Classics in Britain - the equivalent the most prestigious U.S. races - more than any other rider.

He will win no others there. Piggott, who will turn 50 years old on Saturday, has just retired from British racing and will begin a career of training racehorses. But he still has a few rides to go before he rests. Last Saturday he rode in the mile-and-a-half Breeders' Cup Turf at Aqueduct; his mount, 30-1 shot Theatrical, finished 11th, about eight lengths behind the winner, Pebbles. Next he travels to a handful of stops in France, Singapore, Hong Kong and Malaysia for larewell appearances.

Next March, Piggott's authorized biography will be published. The author is the British mystery writer and former jockey, Dick Francis. What has made Piggott so ment as a positive stroke. "You got good for so long? "He thinks like a on with things," he would say later, horse," said Francis. "I mean, "and did them your own way, and when a horse wants to go through a

What many admire most about In the jockeys' room before the Piggott is the way he has "wasted" himself — that is, reduced. He has race he rode here Friday, Piggott, gray-haired and slim, eyed a spread had to diet rigidly throughout his of cold cuts. But he turned away, and discussed what he would be looking forward to when he retired.

"Eating." he said, "of course. I've had to be careful day after day. I love sweets and all that you shouldn't ear. Especially ice cream. Vanilla ice cream. Yes, quite." He said he would miss the excitement of riding. "Every race is fun," he said. "But I think as a trainer, especially for the big races, you can feel a similar kind of excitement." Shortly, in his blue racing silks, he strode out and to the paddock. There, in the late afternoon sun, he climbed aboard a 4-year-old bay filly named Capricorn Belle, an 18-l shot, for a mile race on the grass. Capricorn Belle broke last among the 11 starters, and was no better than ninth in the backstretch and at three-quarters pole. Now Piggott found a place for Capricorn Belle on the rail and moved to the seventh position, to sixth, fifth, fourth. As they pounded down the stretch, Piggott could go no farther. He was blocked by traffic as Tax Dodge crossed the finish line first.

In long shadows Piggott, rising, oulled up on his mount. He didn't freedom win the race, but he gave a noble effort. It was a sweet moment to remember him by.

Zagalo would, as you well know,

Key Money Questions

By Russell Baker EW YORK — Government is about money. It has always been about money. The great quesnons are, and always have been:

1. How is the money to be raised? 2. How is the money to be spent? 3. Who is to decide how the monby will be raised and spent?

Of these, the first two questions are the meat and potatoes of the day's news. The way they are answered determines who gets taxed to the hilt, who gets off easy, who goes scot-free and who gets the lion's share of the gravy. Few people are much interested in the third onestion, although it is the one whose answer determines the kind of political system that governs us. It is the fundamental issue, for it determines whether there will be dictatorship or democracy. If power to decide how to raise and spend money is given to the executive arm of government, as it is given to the Communist Party in the Soviet Union, dictatorship results.

The nature of dictatorship is to tax people for the money needed to perpetuate the dictatorship. In modern times this means vast expenditures for police, military and other security forces required not only to protect the dictatorship from assault, but also to crush any proposal to give the nation's taxed population a voice in deciding how money will be raised and spent.

If Americans seldom think about this ultimate question, it is probably because it has been satisfactorily answered in the United States for so long that it no longer seems to be a question. Here the decisions about how much money to raise, what taxes to levy, how to distribute the tax burden and how to spend the money are powers of

News reporting that speaks of "the president's budget," "the president's tax plan" and so forth, may create an impression that this ultimate power lies with the president;

it does not The question of who has power to set taxes and direct the spending was settled for us too long ago -in England more than 100 years before anyone on this continent even dreamed of forging colonies into a seriously challenging the king's money powers soon after the death of Queen Elizabeth I, while the first American colonies were being planted. The resistance of the Surart kings, James I and his son Charles I led to the English revolution, military defeat for the king's army, the beheading of King Charles I and 11 years of parlia-mentary rule that effectively settled for all time, at least in the Englishspeaking world, the right of the people's elected representatives to have the final say about taxing and

When the Englishmen who created the United States drew up their system for governing, they adopted the measures won generations ear-lier by their forefathers. The president could only propose; Congress had the power to dispose. But then, of course, they gave the president the power to veto if the disposing leased him.

It is possible, given its druthers, that the present Congress would exercise its taxing powers to reduce the immense deficit created by tax cuts and spending increases it authorized at President Reagan's request. If it did, though, the president has said he would veto it. In a reckless moment of campaign de-bate with Walter Mondale last year, he swore off any possibility of raising taxes, and so both Congress and president are stuck with their mmense deficit

Now there is a scheme to end it. Congress will pass an act surrendering all of its most precious rights. Abandoning its power to decide taxing and spending policy. t will order fixed percentage cuts in spending over the next five years until a budget balance automatically occurs in 1991. Thus the Congress gives up the central power granted to the people's representatives in a democracy. Reagan, who doesn't care much about history but hates taxes, is ready to go along despite warnings that it may entail cuts in his big rearmament program. What a shabby performance, especially by our congressional representatives, surrendering the power that so many died to give them, and all because they are afraid that using it will hurt their chances of being re-elected next year.

Young Composers: In Confrontation?

By Mark Hunter PARIS - In European musi-cal circles, this is the fall of the "young composer." Paris's IR-CAM center, with the Festival d'Automne, Ensemble Intercon-temporain and Ensemble Alternance as co-producers, is in the midst of a series entitled "Europe: Young Composers," show-casing works by the generation born between 1946 and 1955.

The Venice Biennale, which ended on Oct. 1, called its 17th International Festival of Contemporary Music "Europe 50/80: Generations in Confrontation, Behind the titles is a sense of promise in contemporary composition, and an irony.

"There's a new generation of composers who have less of a problem with their father figures," said Nicholas Snowman the program director at IRCAM. the Centre Pompidou's institute for acoustic and musical research. The "fathers" be alluded to are the postwar giants of composi-tion, Pierre Boulez, Karlheinz Stockhausen. Luciano Berio, and Jannis Xenakis

Snowman, who is also artistic adviser to the Biennale, feels that the "previous generation" of composers, now in their 40s and early 50s, "felt shadows over them." "The new generation aren't necessarily better composers," he said, "but there's a great diversity of styles; everyone's doing their own thing."

The irony lies in Snowman's implication that the composers in the middle generation were not doing their own thing. It is as though contemporary composition, in Europe at least, held its breath for a generation. Certainly the program presented at IRCAM and the Centre Culturel Wallonie-Bruxelles on Oct. 23-25 was diverse, although it could be called uneven. Rug-gero Lagana's "Wo" set Romantic washes of color against grindingly dissonant contrabass lines, offset by such once-unorthodox but now universal techniques as elissandi of violin barmonics, and percussive notes played with the wood of bows, for an overall effect of lyrical motion.

Jean-Baptiste Devillers's "A Pic" took us back to the 1950s, with a full panoply of Boulezian structure, while James Dillon's "Windows/Canopies" demonstrated the extent to which sounds once peculiar to computers have been fully integrated into acoustic instrumental techniques, producing vertiginal physical ef-

The hits of the series so far, perhaps, were Sandro Gorli's "Le Due Sorgenti," in which lyric string lines and percussive counterpoint developed into a sophisticated harmony of microtones (notes that lie between the tones of the diatonic scale), and "Celi" by Michael Finnissy, a piece that begins in near-hysteria, as two soprano voices rage against an instrumental ensemble, and sustains its momentum to a taut conclusion. Another high point was the solo flute introduction to Thomas H. P. Platz's "Flotenstucke," performed by Pierre-Yves Artaud, whose overblowing techniques gave the effect of two simultaneous lines to a most complex melody.

In total, these pieces signaled the end of a long phase of mere experimentation with new sounds that began in the mid-1950s. "Making new sounds isn't the question now," said Pascal Dusapin, two of whose works "Niobe" and "Hop" conclude the series. "That's easy. But putting them together is hard." The key question for these composers was summed up by Dillon: "How to create a structure where even a disappointing performance can't deny the energy of the piece."

The series also made evident that if there is a confrontation of musical generations, it is in large part a matter of culture. "For this new generation, electronics are as natural as swimming," commented Snowman. "You can now recreate the physics of sound, and that's something this generation feels," in a way previous generations could not be suggested.

A piece like Thierry Lancino's "Profondeurs de Champ" is remarkable for the smoothness of its transitions between natural and taped electronic sounds.

Thierry Lancino: Smooth transitions.

Moreover, the new generation is more open to ideas from outside the Western classical tradition. Among the composers in this series, many, including Lancino, Platz and Dusapin, began in iazz or rock bands. "We have to think of our history as including not only Western music," said Dusapin, "but extra-European music, jazz and variety. Boulez and Xenakis" - with whom Dusapin studied - "hate jazz, but my generation listens to it."

It was plain that Dusapin's generation is not entirely comfortable with its inheritance. 'We're not composers." he scoffed at a symposium held during the series, "we're young composers." And composers who are obliged, as Platz noted, "to find a rationale for what we're doing.

"When new music came into being," Platz said, "it was so new that even the composers had to reflect a lot on what they were doing, and take responsibility for a critical discourse." This dis-obligatory for all young composers:"Now everyone has to do it." One consequence is that "It's easier to get funding if you're seen as representing a movement. And in every movement there are 10 idiots and a leader. I'm not part of a movement, and yes, it has been hard to get funding because of

Yet among participants in the series there was virtually unanimous agreement that "young composers," however obnoxious the title, are better off than the preceding generation. That lost generation of European composers, perhaps, would well deserve and welcome a series or two of their own in the near future.

The "Europe: Young Composers" series continues Nov. 7-9 at the Centre Culturel Wallonie-Bruxelles, with Dusapin's "Hop" and "Niohé."

McCartney Raps Lennon

ney said Tuesday that although John Leanon was "no angel," he "loved him dearly." His statement, issued in London, followed publi-cation of an article in the British magazine Woman, in which McCartney was quoted as calling Lennon a maneuvering swine who took credit for songs he didn't write. McCartney said he feared that the article, based on a telephone interview with the writer Hunter Davies four years ago. could be misinterpreted. In the magazine interview, McCartney described Lennon as jealous, inse-cure with women and suspicious of McCarmey's motives. "He could be a maneuvering swine, which no one ever realized," McCarmey was quoted as saying. "Now since his death, he's become Martin Luther Lennon. But that wasn't him either. He wasn't some sort of a holy saint." In his Tuesday statement, McCartney said: "I'd like to make it clear that John Lennon was no angel but I, like millions of others, loved him dearly." The 1981 interview will appear in an updated version of Davies's book, "The Beatles," which is to be published in December, McCartney was quoted as saying that Lennon "took my songs apart" during their 10-year partnership in the Beatles from 1960 to 1970. "He was paranoiac about my songs. We had great screaming sessions about them," McCartney said of Lennon, who was shot to death outside his New York apartment on Dec. 7, 1980. "As I manured and grew up, I got up to his level," he was quoted as saying. "I wrote songs as he did and sometimes they were as good as his. We grew to be equals. It made him insecure." But Lennon was always insecure with women and once warned McCartney "not to make a play" for his wife Yoko One, McCartney added. "He got really crazy with jealousy sometimes.
